WELCOME ADDRESS

W elcome to the 15th Ghana International Book Fair (GIBF). Year by year, the members of the book chain comprising writers, publishers, printers and booksellers and our partners and sponsors join together to create this fantastic platform, the Ghana International Book Fair. The main objective is to exhibit and to celebrate one of the most enduring cultural products human society has invented.

I am especially delighted to welcome you to the beautiful Accra International Conference Centre, hopefully the new home of our yearly book fair for the foreseeable future.

This year's book fair should have something for many different kinds of people. For industry players, we have a rich array of workshops aimed at capacity building in various areas, Pre-Press Essentials for Designers and Publishers, Books and Culture in the Digital Age and Rights and Licensing Seminar. We have arranged a special meeting with booksellers so we can discuss ways of integrating them more in the book chain. Our young ones have not been left out, there is a special ICT Seminar targeting them specifically under the heading: Exploring the positive side of Social Media. It is important that our youth stay safe and navigate and engage in wholesome behaviour online. The highlight of this year's book fair for me is the Symposium on the search for a credible Language Policy for use in educating our young ones. I hope that Event will be well attended by many especially our policy makers.

I welcome our international visitors, especially our neighbour publishers from Nigeria and our "brothers" from India who are undaunted by our bottlenecks and continue to support us in diverse ways. We recognize your contributions in giving this fair the international flavour we are working towards. I am of the opinion that this Ghana International Book Fair is growing to become the book fair of choice in Sub-Saharan Africa.

Let me thank our cherished sponsors – Heritage Bank, BOST, International Book Bank, Nutech Print Services, Madam Flavor Kitchen, Ghana Culture Forum and others without whom this fair would have been impossible. As we have been saying for some time now, this book fair is an important cultural event that requires support from the whole society. It should not be marginalised into some kind of fringe event by an industry struggling for relevance. Its importance stems or derives from the role that books play in education and cultural enrichment of our society. To have a reading society, books and the industry that primarily produces them should be allowed to assume its role in society with all the support such a role will demand. It's not rocket science. Some societies have realised this and placed the support of the literary arts at par with some other social priorities when it comes to support. I am hoping that we will emulate some examples.

We are hoping that this year's book fair will exceed your business need and expectations – however your feedback is invaluable to help us continue to develop the event. As such we are delighted to have your comments.

On behalf of the Book Fair Committee, we welcome you to the 15th Ghana International Book Fair at the Accra International Conference Centre and a big thank you for making this edition of the GIBF a success.

Brief History of the GHANA INTERNATIONAL BOOK FAIR

The Ghana International Book Fair (GIBF), a flagship event of the Book Industry in Ghana, was first organised in November 1996 to revive the ailing indigenous book industry. The Trade Fair Authority was initially charged with the responsibility of organising this international book fair. Later, the Ghana Book Publishers Association (GBPA) and other stakeholders in the Book Industry formed a trust named, the Ghana International Book Fair Trust (GIBOFT) charged with the responsibility of running the GIBF and other local book fairs. Subsequently, GIBOFT organised the 5th GIBF in 2004.

Over the years, the GBPA has been the leading organiser of the GIBF till date. The GIBF was held every two years until 2008, when the event became an annual event. The Objectives of the book fair are to:

- » Create a market-place for publishers, writers, printers, booksellers, librarians and other stakeholders in the book industry to interact and foster strong links.
- » Create the necessary conditions for Intra-African trade in books and literary material.
- » Showcase the latest publications of the Book Industry enriching culture and education.
- » Create a conducive climate through seminars, conferences, symposia, workshops and other competitions where the intellectual potential in the book industry can find firm roots to grow.
- » Promote the Ghana Book Publishers Association and its stakeholders' contributions to national development.
- » Create a platform where both local and international book industry players come together to trade books and negotiate deals.
- » Give the public the opportunity to have access to a variety of good books for sale at highly discounted prices.
